

FYI

Parents hold onto the small bits of information they are able to pick up. So, if they don't have the full picture, be understanding of their perspective and try to share some more information. If you are calling them, try to share something positive for them to hold onto as well

When in doubt, bring it back to safety.

If a parent is calling because they haven't heard from their student, you can let them know that often that's a good sign if students are so engaged that they're not contacting home

Parents can feel helpless when they know their child needs support, but they can't help, so if there is something they can do, feel free to suggest it.
