

Communicating with Parents:

A note about apologies

- An apology can have really big implications for our organization.
- When to apologize? When our investigation concludes that we made a mistake:
 - Honest disclosure reduces bitterness and mistrust
 - Apology is expected - its absence can be detrimental to parents and family members
 - It can raise questions of who, what, when, where how much to discuss now and in the future
 - If pertaining to Summer, this requires consultation with your on-call team or leadership team to ensure proper follow through/investigation of facts, plus for checks & balances.
