

Protected and Admissible Apologies

Protected apology (validating): Benevolent expression of empathy. Cannot be used in a legal claim as an admission of guilt

→ “I am very sorry that there has been so much worry and upset. This has been very rough.”

Admissible Apology: “I am so sorry I did not get back to you immediately. The error was mine. Thankfully we are addressing the issue right now to come to a resolution as quickly as possible.”
