

Time-Off & In-between session

- Program staff are encouraged to take at least one night off per week.
 - The number of staff who can take time off together will be dependent on the size of the campus. During programming, staff cannot travel more than two hours away from the SSB group in case there is an emergency.
- In-between session management
 - During the two nights between program sessions, staff are encouraged to rest and get ready for the next group.
 - Depending on campus, the team may need to oversee a student or students who arrive early or stay late.
 - Your main responsibility during this period is ensuring the student's safety, providing meals, and ensuring their comfort.
 - For teams that are traveling between campuses for a new session, this time will look different.
 - Teams that are split between two campuses will have less free time in between sessions as the priority is preparing for student arrival and getting to know the new campus.
 - Personal time will still be encouraged in the two days, however, staff must be present and understand that they have to get acclimated with a new campus prior to student arrival.
 - Once your team has finished debriefing from the previous session and preparing for the next session, staff can use any extra time for personal activities. If staff plan to leave the campus, they must inform their team about travel.
