

Scenario

During a weekend excursion trip to Chinatown, a group of students return to the bus with souvenirs. A mentor notices that two students have purchased large decorative samurai swords. The blades are not sharp, but they are full-size and appear realistic.

Another student shows friends a set of novelty lighters they purchased, featuring images of scantily clad women. The student laughs and says, “They’re just souvenirs—they don’t even work that well.”

The students explain that the swords are “not real weapons” and are toys. They also state that no one told them they couldn’t buy these items. One student adds, “We are going to bring them home—it’s not like we’re going to use them here.” The mentor decides the swords are not a violation of the student code of conduct as they are “not real” but does confiscate the lighters.

- Do you agree with the mentor’s decision. Why or why not?
- What is your move as a leader?
