

Program Blogs

Program blogs are designed for parents to stay in-tune with what their teens are up to.

Here is how it works:

1. Blog highlights are submitted by on-campus staff via a Google form (next page).
2. On-campus staff uploads photos to the Google photo albums.
3. Our Marketing Team will post the blog and notify families of the new post.

BLOG POST FOR JUNE 24

We had a fun start to the Summer Springboard program here on the campus of UCLA!

Students arrived in Los Angeles for the kick-off to our program, excited to begin two unforgettable weeks of exploration, growth, and new friendships. After settling into the residence halls and meeting their roommates and mentors, students began forming quick connections, sparked by shared interests, big dreams and the inspiring energy of UCLA's iconic campus. With sunshine, palm trees, and Bruin pride all around, the program is already off to a fantastic start.

Looking ahead, our UCLA students are getting ready for an action-packed schedule filled with hands-on academic courses taught by experienced professionals, exciting excursions throughout Los Angeles, and True You sessions designed to help them reflect on who they are and where they're headed. Whether walking through Royce Quad, collaborating in dynamic classroom spaces, or exploring the vibrant culture of LA, this group is ready to embrace every moment.

We can't wait to see how the next two weeks unfold!

Here are some highlights from the start of the program:

- We started our first night with an activity where everyone lined up by how far they traveled to get here. One of our favorite parts of Summer Springboard is how global it is — with students in this session coming as far away as Italy, Kazakhstan, Bulgaria, and more!
- Our Mentor-Led Clubs Fair kicked off with huge enthusiasm — especially for our sports club. Also up and running are photography, arts and crafts, and more. Students will connect each night over shared interests, playing games and working on projects together.
- Mentor groups explored campus and Westwood on a boundary walk, with mentors giving tours of their favorite places to eat and hang out. Along the way, students mixed and mingled through fun get-to-know-you questions. These groups are bonding quickly!
- Overheard on Day One: "I've been to six summer programs and camps, and I already know this is my favorite one yet. I love how the staff talks to us like we're adults!"
